

BHUTANESE STUDENTS ASSOCIATION (BSA), ARMIDALE

OPERATIONAL GUIDELINES

1. Introduction

Australia's diplomatic relationship with Bhutan began in the 1970s. Since then, the Royal Government of Bhutan has been a beneficiary of Australian support, especially in education, human resource development and health. The University of New England (UNE), Armidale, in New South Wales, Australia is one of the most important institutions that has produced some of the pioneers of the education system in Bhutan. The UNE has been an important old-time partner of Bhutan's education system and the number of Bhutanese students is increasing annually.

The Bhutanese Students' Association (BSA) of Armidale, was instituted on 18 March 2011 to maintain solidarity and promote welfare amongst Bhutanese. However, the presence of Bhutanese students in Armidale has a longstanding and broad history. It can be traced back to a historic educational relationship between Bhutan and the University of New England (UNE) established almost three decades ago. It began with the visit by the then Director General of Education, Dasho Thinley Gyamtsho in 1991 and subsequently as Honorable Minister of Education in 2006. These visits gave birth to the involvement of numerous academic staff of the UNE in several collaborative research and institutional partnerships with the Ministry of Education, the Royal University of Bhutan and its Colleges. The ties between the UNE and Royal Government of Bhutan was further expanded when a group of scholars from the Department of Forests and Park Services (DoFPS) under the Ministry of Agriculture and Forests undertook their graduate studies in Natural Resources Management between 2004 and 2006.

Dr Jim Irvine, Dr David Sloper, Dr David Laird, Dr Tom Maxwell, Dr Peter Nannes and Prof. Warren Halloway, to name a few, were the senior UNE academic staff who were initially involved in the development of a trusting relationship between the UNE and the Ministry of Education and the Royal University of Bhutan. Some of the notable initiatives were basic education programmes within the goal of Education for All (1992), capacity building of teachers and educational leaders at UNE (1992), multigrade teaching (1993), research and consultancy (1997), In-service Education and Training -INSET Project (1998-99), early childhood education (2008); and UNE student-teacher exchange programme (2016). A Memorandum of Understanding was also signed between the UNE and DoFPS in 2013 to promote research, capacity building and exchange program under the initiative of Dr Karl Vernes, Environment and Rural Sciences and Dr Rajanathan Rajaratnam, Geography and Planning, in collaboration with Dr Sangay Dorji and Dr Sangay from DoFPS. Under this MoU, UNE now takes students enrolled in one of its popular units (Himalayan Biogeography and Ecology) to Bhutan every year. MoU also benefitted several other scholars under MoAF mainly through collaborative research and publication with UNE faculty members. There is also the very successful New Colombo Plan Scholarships provided to UNE from the Department of Foreign Affairs and Trade (DFAT), which has seen 6 years of 20 scholarships available for Education students to engage in a short study program to Bhutan. This complements the Geology and ERS group who also have been awarded these scholarships across the last 5 years.

Over the years, UNE has enrolled numerous Bhutanese undergraduates and postgraduate students in the Faculty of Humanities Arts, Social Sciences and Education, (HASSE), Faculty of Medicine and Health and Faculty of Science, Agriculture, Business and Law. Currently, there are 12 postgraduate, three undergraduate students and one post-doctoral fellow at the UNE. Along with them, 21 children are studying in various public schools in Armidale. Today, Armidale is currently home to more than 50 Bhutanese.

It is also noteworthy that the Bhutanese graduates from the University of New England have been highly successful in their respective careers in Bhutan. Notable among them are the two former Vice-Chancellors of the Royal University of Bhutan, Dasho Zangley Drukpa and Dasho Pema Thinley, who also served as the Health Minister and the Education Secretary respectively. Both of the current Presidents of the two colleges of education, Dr Dorji Thinley and Dr Rinchen Dorji completed their PhD from the UNE. Numerous others are serving at the senior level in the Ministry of Education, the Royal University of Bhutan, the Ministry of Agriculture and Forests and several other organizations.

2. The rationale for the establishment of BSA in Armidale, NSW

Bhutanese in Armidale have been increasing over time and currently have reached a record high of 54, including family members. It is anticipated to increase in the near future. Given the increasing number of Bhutanese in Armidale, the BSA is formed to maintain solidarity, instil “Tha-Damtshi, Lay-Jumdrey” (Bhutanese value of loyalty to the King, County and People and the trust in karmic law of cause and effect) and promote welfare amongst Bhutanese. Furthermore, the BSA provides opportunities to represent Bhutan and showcase Bhutanese culture and traditions amongst other international communities in Armidale. More importantly, BSA plays a role in enhancing and sustaining the relationship between Bhutan and the University of New England and the Australian community.

3. Objectives of BSA

- 3.1. Organize events of national significance and importance to sustain and promote Bhutanese values, tradition and culture;
- 3.2. Promote interactions and solidarity amongst Bhutanese communities and friends of Bhutan through social gatherings including celebrations of national festivals;
- 3.3. Promote awareness about Bhutan by participating in events and festivals organized by the UNE and other agencies in Armidale and nearby regions;
- 3.4. Provide information and guidance to Bhutanese students aspiring to study in Armidale;
- 3.5. Assist new students/members in finding accommodation, studies and addressing other issues such as emotional and mental distress;
